The distance from Washington, D.C., to Dodoma, Tanzania, is about 7,702 miles or roughly 12.2 million pangolins.

Home to Mount Kilimanjaro, the highest mountain in Africa!

Slightly bigger than two Californias put together.

Has several volcanoes. One of them, Ol Doiyo Lengai, erupts with lava that looks like oil.

Black lava. What?!

→ 19,341 feet tall! →

Some animals that live here: elephants, zebras, giraffes, rhinoceroses, lions, leopards, crocodiles, hippopotamuses, wildebeests and pangolins.

Can you find them all on the map?

The capital is Dodoma, but Dar es Salaam is the biggest, busiest city.

Malaria kills many Tanzanian children.

Clean water is available to only 55.6% of the people.

Compassion gives out bed nets sprayed with chemicals to protect kids from mosquitoes that carry malaria.

Compassion builds wells, gives out filters to clean the water, and teaches kids that they should never drink dirty water.
